[NYPD]

They are often seen at Grand Central Station Broadway or Dunkin Donuts They don't know the way when you try ask for directions However they are very strong when dealing with violent crimes And they would pose for you if you ask to take pictures of them

>Italy's face is so expressive he's so fun!

It's probably because I was in Italy for quite some time that I made this observation. It is such an expressive country I would really like to draw him with more facial expressions! I especially like this panel and the one that follows it!

>What is the name of that flag-like thing Seneca holds in his hand !!?

It's a publication that Seneca himself has written!
In Ancient Rome people used to write in scrolls

>When will we get to see England's brothers?

UK (England) will appear first, but you'll see the rest once I'm done with introducing all major countries in the series. I've learned a lot more about Scotland! And I've always liked Northern Ireland so it's really fun rereading about it.

I think the Great Britain brothers will turn out to be a rather peculiar family. the kind that would gather at home and make a dig at one another's fashion sense but not to the point it'd become an argument, or make awkward small talks that don't go anywhere. or someone will say something that others don't respond. etc
But at least they are in good terms in recent times

Thank you for all your comments and requests
I've already submitted a lot of materials for the Jump+ serialization.
